Facing ASD – One Father's Journey from Denial to Acceptance

By Andrew Hanson

To all you fathers who've struggled to embrace your special child's diagnosis and engage fully in their needs, you are not alone. I share with you my experience.

A Note from Parent to Parent

It has been a long 4 months and I hope you are adjusting to this new normal that we are facing with your families. I do hope that you are taking care of yourselves, including your mental health. It is so rough to try to plan life without knowing what to expect from week to week. I am right there with you with trying to navigate living life during a pandemic. I wish I had a magic wand that I could flash to see what the future will look like but I do not. I would advise you to ask questions about school, about Covid, about childcare and finances. If you don't feel like you are too tired to ask or don't know where to start, please call the Parent to Parent team. We are here to walk with you through this rough time. We may not have the answers but we can guide to who does or just listen to your joys and

Congratulations Elizabeth Razo!

Elizabeth won the Walking Challenge with Mamas Especiales by walking 57 miles!

In her own words: I wanted to focus on exercise every day to improve my health. I really enjoyed it! I had time to relax and realize many things while I was walking. I feel better physically and emotionally so I kept walking after the challenge. I was able to recognize how beautiful our environment is that we live in. I would like to see more challenges like this to encourage people to participate.

I am a preschool teacher here in Walla Walla. I participated a long time ago in bicycle challenges or running challenges. My hobbies are craft art projects and photography.
