inside the school. There's a lot that's unique about Robert Churchwell Elementary. Experience the 'Living Museum' at Robert Churchwell Elementary and Umbrella student organizations.

The West End Neighborhood will serve as home to several Student Organizations, Leadership and Service Space.

Free tickets will be provided to the first 50 people who sign up to attend the event. Dr. André L. Churchwell, vice chancellor for outreach, inclusion and equity, had this to say: "Passion for building community—paving the way for a successful and inclusive future for Vanderbilt University." Tommy Oswalt, BA'20, did not come to Vanderbilt with a mapped-out path, but he's here now. "I'm passionate about building community and connecting with people. Vanderbilt has really opened my eyes to different perspectives and experiences." Oswalt is a student at Vanderbilt University and a member of the Black Student Union.

Building community at VU paves the way for diversity, equity and inclusion. The NCI is committed to fostering an environment where all students feel welcomed and supported.

Nursing has won a Health Professions Higher Education Excellence in Diversity award. For the third year in a row, the Vanderbilt University School of Nursing earns 2022 'INSIGHT Into Diversity Awards' from the National League for Nursing. The school is one of only 11 schools in the country to receive this honor. The award recognizes schools that have demonstrated leadership in diversity, equity and inclusion. The Vanderbilt University School of Nursing is committed to creating a diverse and inclusive community that values the unique background, experiences and perspectives of each individual. The school is proud to have a diverse student body, faculty and staff who come together to create a vibrant learning environment.

Professor Stephanie Budwey, a member of the Vanderbilt Divinity School, explores the intersection of culture, law, science and theology in her new book. In her new book spanning culture, law, science and theology, "The Right to Belong," Budwey examines the role of race, gender, sexuality and identity in American society. Among the topics covered was how art can offer hope during unsettled times and help create a more just, civil and moral America. The book is available now.

The Office for Equity, Diversity and Inclusion, in collaboration with the Center for First-Generation Student Success, hosted a panel of Vanderbilt students and faculty to discuss the importance of inclusion and diversity on campus. The Vanderbilt community to join us for First-Generation Celebration Week Nov. 3-11. The Center for First-Generation Student Success is committed to providing resources and support to first-generation students at Vanderbilt University. First-generation students are defined as those whose parents did not attend college. The Center offers a range of programs and services designed to support first-generation students as they navigate college and beyond.

The Office for Equity, Diversity and Inclusion also celebrated Native American Heritage Month. Native American Heritage Month is a time to intentionally celebrate Native American contributions to American society. The Office for Equity, Diversity and Inclusion, in collaboration with the Department of Anthropology and the Center for the Study of Race and Social Justice, hosted a panel of Native American scholars to discuss the unique, rich and diverse cultures, traditions and histories of Native American people. NAHM is also an opportune time to educate the Vanderbilt community about the history and culture of Native American peoples. The Office for Equity, Diversity and Inclusion and the NAHM committee are committed to upholding the values of diversity, equity and inclusion on campus.

The IEW 2022 theme is "Circles of Motion." The goal of celebrating international education and exchange is to promote understanding and appreciation for different cultures and perspectives. The week-long event features a variety of panels, workshops, and activities that focus on the theme of "Circles of Motion." The event aims to bring together people from different backgrounds and perspectives to foster understanding and respect for diversity.

"Eagle Poem" by Joy Harjo is a reflection on nature and spirituality. Joy Harjo, the 23rd U.S. Poet Laureate, was born in Oklahoma and is a member of the Cherokee Nation. She is the first Native American to hold the position of U.S. Poet Laureate. Her work has been published in numerous anthologies and magazines, and she has written more than 15 books of poetry. In her book "Eagle Poem," Harjo shares her thoughts on the role of nature in our lives and the importance of respecting and understanding the natural world. She writes about her experiences growing up in a family of indigenous artists and how these experiences have influenced her work. Harjo hopes that her poetry can help readers connect with the natural world and understand the importance of protecting the environment.

Uplifting Native American voices during the month of November is important. This month is dedicated to recognizing the unique, rich and diverse cultures, traditions and histories of Native American peoples. NAHM is an opportunity to educate the general public about the contributions and achievements of Native Americans and to celebrate the rich cultural heritage of Native American peoples. The Office for Equity, Diversity and Inclusion and the NAHM committee are committed to upholding the values of diversity, equity and inclusion on campus.

"Troubled History of Thanksgiving" is a book that explores the complicated history of Thanksgiving. The author, RebeccaYep, challenges the traditional narrative of Thanksgiving and highlights the true history of the holiday. The book covers the history of Thanksgiving from the first Pilgrim feast in 1621 to the present day. The author argues that Thanksgiving has been used to promote a false narrative of American history. Instead of perpetuating these falsehoods, the author chooses to highlight and celebrate the true history of Thanksgiving. The book is a valuable resource for anyone interested in learning more about the true history of Thanksgiving.

During IEW 2022, eight Vanderbilt students are among those invited to the launch. The students are diverse in terms of their backgrounds, experiences, and perspectives. They are leaders on campus and are committed to creating a more inclusive and equitable campus community. The students are excited to be a part of the launch and are looking forward to sharing their experiences and insights with others. The launch is an opportunity for the Vanderbilt community to come together and celebrate the diversity and richness of the human experience.

The fall 2022 SDCG cycle has funded 15 proposals, with awards being made to projects led by individuals from across the university. The SDCG cycle is designed to support research and innovation in the fields of science, technology, engineering, mathematics and medicine. The awards are intended to support projects that have the potential to make a significant impact on the fields they represent. The SDCG cycle is open to all departments and schools at Vanderbilt University. The SDCG cycle is an opportunity for Vanderbilt University to support research and innovation in the fields of science, technology, engineering, mathematics and medicine.

A panel of four Vanderbilt faculty members discussed the experiences of intersex people in church and faith communities. The panelists shared their experiences and insights on how to create a more inclusive and welcoming environment for intersex people in church and faith communities. The panelists emphasized the importance of providing support and resources for intersex people, as well as creating a welcoming and inclusive environment for all individuals.

Vanderbilt Divinity School Professor Stephanie Budwey explores the intersection of culture, law, science and theology in her new book, "The Right to Belong." The book examines the role of race, gender, sexuality and identity in American society. Among the topics covered was how art can offer hope during unsettled times and help create a more just, civil and moral America. The book is available now.

"Eagle Poem" by Joy Harjo is a reflection on nature and spirituality. Joy Harjo, the 23rd U.S. Poet Laureate, was born in Oklahoma and is a member of the Cherokee Nation. She is the first Native American to hold the position of U.S. Poet Laureate. Her work has been published in numerous anthologies and magazines, and she has written more than 15 books of poetry. In her book "Eagle Poem," Harjo shares her thoughts on the role of nature in our lives and the importance of respecting and understanding the natural world. She writes about her experiences growing up in a family of indigenous artists and how these experiences have influenced her work. Harjo hopes that her poetry can help readers connect with the natural world and understand the importance of protecting the environment.

Uplifting Native American voices during the month of November is important. This month is dedicated to recognizing the unique, rich and diverse cultures, traditions and histories of Native American peoples. NAHM is an opportunity to educate the general public about the contributions and achievements of Native Americans and to celebrate the rich cultural heritage of Native American peoples. The Office for Equity, Diversity and Inclusion and the NAHM committee are committed to upholding the values of diversity, equity and inclusion on campus.

"Troubled History of Thanksgiving" is a book that explores the complicated history of Thanksgiving. The author, RebeccaYep, challenges the traditional narrative of Thanksgiving and highlights the true history of the holiday. The book covers the history of Thanksgiving from the first Pilgrim feast in 1621 to the present day. The author argues that Thanksgiving has been used to promote a false narrative of American history. Instead of perpetuating these falsehoods, the author chooses to highlight and celebrate the true history of Thanksgiving. The book is a valuable resource for anyone interested in learning more about the true history of Thanksgiving.

During IEW 2022, eight Vanderbilt students are among those invited to the launch. The students are diverse in terms of their backgrounds, experiences, and perspectives. They are leaders on campus and are committed to creating a more inclusive and equitable campus community. The students are excited to be a part of the launch and are looking forward to sharing their experiences and insights with others. The launch is an opportunity for the Vanderbilt community to come together and celebrate the diversity and richness of the human experience.

The fall 2022 SDCG cycle has funded 15 proposals, with awards being made to projects led by individuals from across the university. The SDCG cycle is designed to support research and innovation in the fields of science, technology, engineering, mathematics and medicine. The awards are intended to support projects that have the potential to make a significant impact on the fields they represent. The SDCG cycle is open to all departments and schools at Vanderbilt University. The SDCG cycle is an opportunity for Vanderbilt University to support research and innovation in the fields of science, technology, engineering, mathematics and medicine.

A panel of four Vanderbilt faculty members discussed the experiences of intersex people in church and faith communities. The panelists shared their experiences and insights on how to create a more inclusive and welcoming environment for intersex people in church and faith communities. The panelists emphasized the importance of providing support and resources for intersex people, as well as creating a welcoming and inclusive environment for all individuals.