TOWN GUIDES

Having some trouble embracing February? Me, too. I used to sail through winter, bragging how much I LOVED New England, and could never see myself living elsewhere. I'm not so sure about that anymore, but I am trying to make the best of it! Lunch at the Fondue Village for my daughter's 25th birthday (see below) certainly lifted our spirits. Next, I intended to give inflammation-busting cryotherapy a go, but chickened out and sent Laura instead. She reports back on this list. Maybe barbecue dinner at the new Black Jax in Centerbrook will have you dreaming of lazy summer days. We'll get through it. Only 45 days 'til spring.

Love,
Erica

Cheese & Cheer at Fondue Village at The Ocean House

When I heard about The Fondue Village last year, I couldn't wait to go. But it ain't cheap, so I needed a good reason. My daughter's 25th birthday (which we'll be celebrating all month long) was IT. And, an ultra-millennial move - declaring that she wanted nothing but experiences - clinched it...

Jack's Back with Black Jax

Saloon, Centerbrook

While there is nothing especially attractive about photos of large slabs of meat, don't let that deter you, especially if you're a lover of authentic barbecue...

Hot and Cold at KUR Recovery Spa, Old Saybrook

I've been intrigued by Cryotherapy and its anti-inflammatory benefits (but was slightly terrified), so I sent Laura to give it a whirl...

How Kids Deal with Divorce

By Suisman Shapiro Attorneys-at-Law

Divorce is painful for children, no matter how old they are. How kids deal with divorce greatly depends on their age and level of maturity. While younger children may cling to parents, teenagers often pull away and become uncharacteristically rebellious. To make things even more complicated, social media has made the landscape much more dangerous. However, there are warning signs you can look out for, and the good news is that there are clear ways to make separation and divorce easier for kids. For example, encourage your child to talk about his/her feelings. Be available and make sure they can always reach you, even if it's during the other parent's scheduled parenting time.

It is achievable to have an amicable divorce and start a healthy new life for both you and your children. Attorney Rob Tukey concentrates in family law and can help parents navigate through this difficult process. He practices at Suisman Shapiro, the largest law firm in eastern Connecticut.
