George Mason University is doing its part to limit the spread of COVID-19. On Monday, Aug. 10, it began undergoing COVID-19 testing returning student athletes by John Hollis.

A collaborative effort between the Athletics department and Mason's Roughly 30 Patriot student-athletes were screened at testing returning athletes.

Researchers sniff out organic compound (VOC) fingerprints to sniff out sickness. The team, part of Mason's Organic Compound (VOC) fingerprinting through analysis of VOC profiles, as published in Nature Scientific Reports.

Researchers in Mason’s Clodomiro Picado Institute for Biohealth Innovation and Sulaiman Yamin, an allergy and immunology specialist, neutralized SARS-CoV-2 virus and COVID-19 disease. New fall and spring and summer virtual speaker series, hosted by the Mason Online Pandemic MODeling Forum. The Friday, August 7 marked the final summer session of the Mason Online Pandemic MODeling Forum. The Friday, August 7 marked the final summer session of the Mason Online Pandemic MODeling Forum.

Students discovered a love of science while in high school. She entered George Mason softball student-athlete Amber Verstynen discovered a career path through NASA internship.

Mason has remained committed to its efforts for a safe return to campus this fall.

In this Issue

- In This Issue
- Safe Return to Campus: Spring 2021
- Research & Discovery
- Mason Science Community
- In the News
- Events
- Share this email: