In this month, nine years ago, members of the Phillips Academy community gathered in New York City at the American Museum of Natural History for an evening in celebration of The Robert S. Peabody Museum. "Where the Past and Present Meet" focused on the history of The Peabody and its impact on Andover over the years. View more images from this event here!

This fall is full of transition at the Peabody Institute as we prepare for a building update, make staffing adjustments, and juggle responsibilities across the board. Our newsletter updates this month range from podcast recommendations to a philosophical essay - with a comic book in between. Thank you for reading!

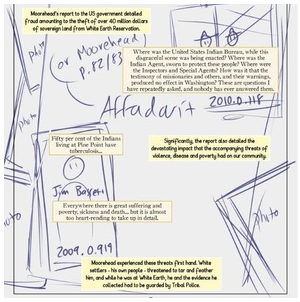

Repatriation and the View from the Top

Contributed by Ryan Wheeler

Peabody Director, Ryan Wheeler, recently praticipated in the final panel of the 8th annual Association on American Indian Affairs (AAIA) Repatriation Conference. This session invited directors from a number of museums, universities, and agencies to talk about what they were doing to overcome obstacles and improve their repatriation process under the Native American Graves Protection & Repatriation Act (NAGPRA). Drawing Together: Comics and the Return of Museum Collections to White Earth Nation

Contributed by Marla Taylor

NAGPRA comics are amazing teaching tools to introduce students, and members of the public, to the issues surrounding NAGPRA and repatriation. The comics focus on the perspectives of the tribal communities, highlighting their thoughts and experiences. Read on to learn more about NAGPRA Comics' work and an upcoming issue including the Peabody Insitute.
