Criminal Investigations and Network Analysis (CINA)

THOUGHTS FROM THE DIRECTOR

Jim Jones

Clear and the CINA MSI team at George Mason University are in the middle of an exciting national research project. This project is designed to be part of our nation's counterterrorism strategy. We have strong support from relevant stakeholders, including the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), the Federal Law Enforcement Training Centers (FLETC), and other federal agencies. This national effort is critical in ensuring the United States remains resilient against the threats of terrorism.

In the upcoming weeks, we will be releasing our first set of research findings, which will include insights into the dynamics of terrorist networks, coordination strategies, and potential vulnerabilities. These findings are expected to be published in the coming months and will be available for download on our website.

As we continue to advance our work, I encourage all stakeholders to engage with us and provide feedback. Your input will help shape the direction of our research and ensure that our findings are as impactful as possible. Together, we can drive positive change and enhance our nation's security.

CINA Welcomes 2021-21 Open RFP White Paper Submissions

As of May 1, 2021, CINA is accepting proposals for the rolling Open RFP. This Open RFP provides the opportunity for any researcher, academic, or non-profit organization to submit research ideas intended to address questions and challenges that CINA, DHS, or its federal partners are currently facing or are expected to face in the near future. This rolling Open RFP provides opportunity for ideas intended to address questions and challenges that CINA, DHS, or its federal partners are currently facing or are expected to face in the near future. This rolling Open RFP provides opportunity for ideas intended to address questions and challenges that CINA, DHS, or its federal partners are currently facing or are expected to face in the near future.

The CINA team is excited to review the submissions and provide feedback. We encourage all parties interested in contributing to the field of homeland security and counterterrorism to consider submitting a proposal. To learn more about the research areas and how to submit your proposal, visit our website's CINA Network section.

CINA Welcomes 2021-21 Open RFP White Paper Submissions

As of May 1, 2021, CINA is accepting proposals for the rolling Open RFP. This Open RFP provides the opportunity for any researcher, academic, or non-profit organization to submit research ideas intended to address questions and challenges that CINA, DHS, or its federal partners are currently facing or are expected to face in the near future. This rolling Open RFP provides opportunity for ideas intended to address questions and challenges that CINA, DHS, or its federal partners are currently facing or are expected to face in the near future. This rolling Open RFP provides opportunity for ideas intended to address questions and challenges that CINA, DHS, or its federal partners are currently facing or are expected to face in the near future.

The CINA team is excited to review the submissions and provide feedback. We encourage all parties interested in contributing to the field of homeland security and counterterrorism to consider submitting a proposal. To learn more about the research areas and how to submit your proposal, visit our website's CINA Network section.