February 24, 2020

Research pertaining to environmental science and sustainability. The biweekly newsletter aims to bring businesses and organizations together so that, together, we can more effectively address the world's critical water issues. Sympoiesis Conference participants will address the theme of epochal precarity associated with irreversible environmental catastrophe that is impacting all sectors of society.

The 64th Annual Meeting of the Comparative and International Education Society will be held in late March. Over 3000 attendees will represent the professional community, and engage in meaningful intellectual exchange. Over 3000 attendees will represent the professional community, and engage in meaningful intellectual exchange.

The Environmental Engineering Program at Virginia Tech is hosting a symposium on renewable energy and sustainable transportation. This event will showcase new ideas, technologies, and policies, products, and services. This event will showcase new ideas, technologies, and policies, products, and services.

The Financial Assistance Program at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science and National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration Department of Commerce invites qualified investigators to submit applications for the FY2021 and FY2022 cohorts. The program funds applied aquaculture research projects to address issues related to: 1) Genetics of individual species; 2) Effect of management practices on species; and 3) Design of environmentally and economically sustainable commercial aquaculture systems. This program aims to support research that contributes to the understanding of the genetic, physiological, and environmental factors that affect the health and productivity of aquaculture species.

The purpose of the Microscopic and Microbial Insights into the Stony Coral Tissue (MOMIT) project is to develop a new framework for understanding the role of microorganisms in the health and productivity of coral reefs. The project will investigate the role of microorganisms in the health and productivity of coral reefs.

The Coronal Analysis of SHocks and Waves (CASHeW) project is a partnership between the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. The project aims to develop a new framework for understanding the role of coronal waves in the structure and evolution of the solar corona.

The Urban Issues Lecture Series will feature a talk by journalist and speaker Malcolm Gladwell on his new book "Talking to Strangers." Gladwell will discuss how Mason will be meeting energy security challenges in the coming years.

The MetroLab Network was launched as part of the White House Smart Cities Initiative in 2015. The network includes 29 cities, 5 large universities, and 5 small universities. The network is designed to transform state and local government. MetroLab Network is a collaborative of 29 cities, 5 large universities, and 5 small universities.

This exhibition features a collection of Agustina Woodgate's recent artworks in which the artist explores the relationship between humans and the natural world. With the advent of digital mapping technologies, the use of globes and paper maps will likely be reduced. The exhibition explores the relationship between humans and the natural world.

The School of Business Sustainability Contest will be celebrating Earth Month (April) and we need your help to do so effectively.

The 50th Anniversary of Earth Day will be celebrated on Friday, March 27. Mason International Collaborative (MIC) will be available to give a 3-minute talk, or alternatively would like a slide included in the final presentation.

The Sustainability Research and Innovation Congress (SRI 2020) will be held on March 28. The event will feature a keynote address by award-winning director Jennifer Baichwal and her cinematographers, Nicholas de Pencier and Edward Burtynsky. The team will discuss their new documentary film, Anthropocene: The Human Epoch, which explores the impact of human activities on the planet.

Confirmation of program will be available in mid-March. Mason International Collaborative (MIC) will be available to give a 3-minute talk, or alternatively would like a slide included in the final presentation.

Please feel free to forward the survey to interested groups and individuals at mic@gmu.edu.

To receive our future emails, please subscribe. To opt out, please use TrueRemove.